Upland students write to hostages

Staff Writer

Upland Elementary School students are concerned about the American hostages in Iran and have written letters to them. One class even has put up a flag bulletin board with the theme, "We fly our flags for the

It was after the bulletin board had been put up by Bette Waggoner's ungraded first through third grade class, that teacher Dina Olsen talked to the other teachers and they decided that each class in its own way would write letters to the hostages.

Principal Thomas Fine approved of the idea. Various classes throughout the school are participating.

Olsen said her first and second grade class was familar with the situation in Iran when she first brought up the subject. To help her students understand, she connected the problem in Iran with the study of the Pilgrims and their search for freedom.

Olsen's students gave their reasons for writing the letters. Lee Ann Mitchell said, "To show them that we love them." The frequent reason was that the class wanted the hostages to "come back to America"

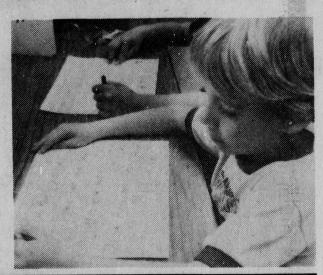

Olsen earlier had explained what it was like to be a hostage. Randy Zepeda recalled that "it is like being locked up in a closet...they cannot come or go.'

Barbara Jackson's fifth and sixth grade class also wrote letters. One student said that he wrote the letter because the "hostages don't have anything better to do than read letters and books.'

Johnson's students had opinions on what the United States should have done when Iran took the hostages. The opinions ranged from, "We should have given them the Shah," to "They acted correctly, but they could be doing more now than they have been doing.

Yvonne Ynostroza included in her letter the salutation, "Dear Friends," told what she was doing at home and, in parenthesis, wrote, "I hope you can read this, ha, ha."

Two boys wrote that they knew what it was like to be a hostage. One said he knew because he had a cousin who had spent two years in juvenile hall.

Upland ordinance enforced

Grocery store alarm permit is revoked

By DINAH ROSE Staff Writer

The Upland City Council Monday night acted for the first time on a nine-month-old ordinance, revoking the permit for an alarm system in a local grocery store.

The city ordinance was drafted in response to an excessive number of false alarms in area businesses. Upland Police Chief Coy Estes told the council two patrol cars respond to every alarm at a commercial establishment, with the assumption a burglary is in process. 'This is a danger to the public,' he said. "False alarms use up police hours needed elsewhere in the city.'

The ordinance sets a limit of four false alarms within a one-year period. Estes said the grocery store in question had a total of nine false alarms between July and December

The police department initiated correspondence with the store, and in a letter dated Dec. 17 requested a meeting with store officials to discuss the problem. They received no response. Estes said he thought the department had made every effort to cooperate, and recommended the permit be revoked.

Charles Smith, general supervisor for the grocery store chain, was present to appeal the decision. He said the company had never received the letter requesting a meeting, and was working with employees to try to correct the problem.

In a breakdown of causes of the nine false alarms, he said three were the result of employee error, one was caused by electricians installing new checkstands, one was the fault of the alarm company, one was caused by a child inadvertedly hitting the hold-up button, and the cause of three of the alarms was un-

'We have talked to employees, the alarm company, and put protective covers on the hold-up buttons, Smith told the council. "We are doing what we can to try to solve the problem."

Estes reminded Smith that the store had experienced similar problems with the system since 1977, when 14 false alarms went off in an eight-week period. The problem was remedied temporarily, but exceeded the limit on false alarms set by the 1979 ordinance.

Estes said the alarm company, Federal Alarm Co., was "generally reliable," but he thought responsibility for the false alarms still rested with the company and the grocery store management.

Councilwoman Ina Petokas asked Estes if it would be possible to extend a one-month probationary period to the store. He said that in his estimation, the ordinances should be enforced. The council concurred, with Petokas the only no

The store will be without an alarm system for a period of six months, until they may reapply for the permit. Police assistance must be summoned by telephone during that "The problems this raises concerns me," said Estes, "but it concerns me more having two units respond at the speed they do on a priority call such as this, when they may be needed elsewhere in the city on a legitimate call."

Income tax help offered at library

The Upland Recreation Department and American Association of Retired Persons will work with the Internal Revenue Service to offer the Volunteer Income Tax Assistance Program (VITA) beginning Feb. 6.

VITA is designed to help senior citizens and those with low incomes to figure their tax returns. It has helped more than 600 people in its three years at the Upland Public Library. The program will be taught by volunteers who have participated in several days of training by the IRS.

The program will be offered at the library Wednesdays and Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Hyperactive child has no choice over behavior

By LINDA BERGSTEDT Panorama Editor

The hyperactive child has no choice over his behavior. He is born with this disorder and it is not a result of bad parenting or any other external cause

'Hyperkinesis is the medical word for a child who is hyperactive, but not out of choice," Dr. Andrew J. Rooks said during a recent meeting of the San Antonio Community Hospital Auxiliary.

Speaking in Aita Auditorium at SACH, the child psychiatrist on the hospital medical staff related the causes, symptoms and controls for hyperkinesis Basically it is a problem the child is born with, at least about 70 percent are. About 30 percent occur because of pregnancy problems, problems at the time of birth or shortly after birth," he said. Four out of five hyperactive children are boys and it is possible, Dr. Rooks said, that one out of every seven boys is affected by hyperkinesis. He described this condition as a nuerological problem treated by neurologists, pediatricians and others who deal with children. He said psychiatric help is sought for behavior disorders that may result from the condition.

As to what causes hyperkinesis, Dr. Rooks said, "Part of the brain seems to develop more slowly than it should so there is a developmental delay in the nervous system. "The child is like a car. The engine works, the carbuerator functions, everything works. The problem is the braking system - they can't stop or slow down and have the self-control you would expect in a 2-year-old." He said the problem can be aggrevated by food substances, not due to an allergy, but because of being sensitive to certain foods. "The problem is not started by bad parenting," he stressed, "but, like any problem, is made worse by bad

Dr. Rooks described the symptoms of hyperactivity as being rather broad. Attention-span is very short and colic is rather severe in the infant, but the psychiatrist cautioned that these two symptoms don't necessarily indicate hyperkinesis.

"More common symptoms occur around 1 year of age." he said, "when the child is a crib rocker, a head 'The child runs once he begins to walk and gets into things more than other children do.

There is a higher rate of raiding the refrigerator and this is as early as 4 in the morning.

Dr. Rooks said the hyperactive child tends to be very bright and said that is a blessing and a curse. This type of child is investigative so he develops a sharp and active

Most people tend to ignore these children's problems in early years and dismiss the child's behavior with comments such as "He's just active" or "He sure is all-boy." Because of this, most hyperactive kids don't get into therapy until they have started school and their behavior is disruptive to the classroom and on the playground. Major problems caused by hyperactive children in classes are that they can't sit still in class, are distracted by everything around them and can't settle down and do work unless the teacher helps them directly. "Around the second or third grade, a teacher will suggest to the parents that the child be seen for the problem," Dr. Rooks said. 'They're sloppy. Their handwriting is bad, they draw larger figures than other children do," he said. On the playground, a hyperactive child tends to be bossy and bullish and his frustration tolerance level is very low.

"They tend to be very irritable and get into fights," he pointed out.

'A hyperactive child is a little bit paranoid - not in a psychotic sense," Dr. Rooks cautioned. "He thinks others are picking on him because he doesn't realize how he comes across," he explained.

'So this child is not making it in class or on the playground and has the same situation at home. The problem is complicated because somebody must be blamed. Psychology tends to say problems are caused by bad parenting. Dad's at work, so it's Mother's fault, is the way the thinking goes," he said.
"Mother's actually the victim as is the child," he said.

The situation today is further complicated because it appears the hyperkinetic disorder does not stop in midteens like it once was thought.

Dr. Rooks described the adult hyperkinetic in this

'He tends to be an individual who is immature, has a bad temper, is irresponsible and has a hard time holding a job. He strikes out at his wife and children.

'I think he tends to get married rather young without advance planning and also divorces rather young. He said the hyperactive adult could be helped, "but he won't come to the office."

How is this condition treated in the child? What can be done for the hyperactive child? Dr. Rooks said hyperkinesis must be acknowledged as a nuerological illness and appropriate drugs should be prescribed such as ritalin and dexetrine. This deficit is not curable, but medications are highly effective in controlling the symptoms," he said. He admitted there is controversy over the administration of drugs for hyperactive children, but he feels they work well to stimulate the part of the brain that is not functioning well.

The effect of a drug such as ritalin is apparent after 20 or 30 minutes, Dr. Rooks noted, saying that the change in the child is a Jekyll-Hyde type change. The child's ability to concentrate improves, he can tolerate frustration much better and his handwriting and behavior both improve. The medication lasts between 3 1/2 and 4 hours and not all hyperactive children have to take the drug three "It is taken to prevent problems and it is not addictive, but people are against it because they don't like to have their kids on medicine, don't want them 'drugged up.' "This is like having a headache and not taking aspirin to get rid of it," he said.

Diet also plays some part in controlling hyperactive symptoms, Dr. Rooks said referring to the controversial diet developed by Dr. Ben Feingold, a pediatric allergist who has written about the effects of food dyes and additives on hyperkinetic children.

After reading a paper by Dr. Feingold, the child pyschiatrist noted that "nothing is exempt.

He said he does not recommend the Feingold diet because "it is too hard to follow."

'But a possible dietary change is helpful. Parents should eliminate the sugar bowl, pre-sweetened cereals, all chocolate, Kool-Aid, High-C drinks and anything else with high quantities of food coloring.

Beyond the medical treatments of hyperkinesis, psychotherapy can be useful in helping the patient and his parents in understanding the problem, Dr. Rooks said.

"Therapy will not get rid of the problem, but can be used to deal with related problems.

'Emotional problems because of hyperkenesis can be helped." he said His final advice to the group was to be helpful and sympathetic to parents with hyperactive children.

Patients learn to live with ostomies

By ROBERT LEE Staff Writer

The cure being worse than the disease may be the first reaction of most people to an ostomy.

But for the people who have undergone the procedure to bypass waste material from a diseased intestine or bladder, it is something you learn to live with

While some people take having an ostomy in stride, said Mary Beaty, an enterostomal therapist at Pomona Valley Community Hospital, it can have a double affect on patients since they have to deal with both the ostomy and the disease that caused it.

When you think of all the things that are closing in on a patient it's a hell of an adjustment," said Beaty.

In the surgery itself, a surgeon bypasses a diseased portion of the intestine and brings another portion to the surface, creating an opening or stoma in the abdominal wall. Fecal material is then evacuated through the stoma, either through irrigation or into a bag worn by the Beaty explained that her job is to teach the patients how to take care of themselves after the ostomy has been performed.

Her clinic at the hospital is also the only outpatient ostomy clinic between Arcadia and San Bernardino.

Beaty said she became involved in this type of therapy after she had to undergo a temporary ostomy herself and found that nurses tended to avoid trying to help her since they weren't sure how to take care of an ostomy

"Nurses don't get that many ostomy patients that they become proficient at it," said Beaty

With her ostomy there was one nurse who "cared enough to lumber through" and help, but who really didn't know what type of care was needed, she explained.

Beaty added that there also appeared to be an aversion to the ostomy because it dealt with waste material and some people would think of it as dirty

She said she can offer the patient encouragement, but learning to cope with an ostomy is something the they usually have to work out for themselves.

"I don't think that I can teach anyone to cope, that's something that has to come from within," said Beaty. With diseases that can debilitate the patient the adjust-

Marie Hinjosa, 30, of Ontario, who has had an ostomy since October, 1977, explained, "It got to the point where I was always sick. Every year I was in the hospital once or twice a year.

She said she began to realize how her sickness was affecting her family when her daughter wrote a story of a family outing for school and included the sentence,

Mommy stayed home because she was sick. Since her surgery for ulcerative colitis she is almost never sick and now wishes she had had the surgery

When first told of the surgery, explained Mrs. Hinjosa, "I kind of thought I'd rather die.

She added that she worried how an ostomy would affect her married life and how her friends would react. Others, like Harold Vassar of Chino, consider the operation far better than being continually sick.

Vassar said he had never heard of an ostomy before his doctor explained it to him, but was eager to go ahead. He explained that he had reached the point where anything was better than what he was going through.

But those who have suffered through a debilitating disease for several years are usually better prepared for the surgery. With patients who have cancer of the colon, one of the most common reasons for performing an ostomy, there is usually no sign that something is wrong. "If the cancer patient is eventually cured of his disease they tend to accept it rather well, but it's harder for them," said Dr. Charles Thum, a Pomona surgeon.

He added that the incidence of ostomy surgery because of cancer is probably going up.

'The man who might, a few years ago, have died of a heart attack at age 45 is now living to 60 to and gets cancer of the colon," said Dr. Thum.

'Not as hectic as Municipal Court'

An outpatient clinic is also important, he explained, since patients will usually leave the hospital long before they have learned all they need to know about taking care of their stoma. Learning how to take care of the stoma, explained Beahave no problems at all.' ty, is often half the battle in people learning to live with an ostomy. And most find it "futile" to keep hating what

In such cases, said Dr. Thum, the therapists are essential to lend emotional support as well as practical knowledge to the patient.

has happened to them.

"I would say 98 percent of the people are realistic enough to learn to live with it," said Beaty.

Vassar explained that it's a lot like wearing glasses in that he frequently forgets he even has an ostomy.

"It's something that's a part of me and always will be," said Vassar. "It's a mental attitude. If a person makes up his mind that this is what has to be done they'll

Judge Schaefer enjoys new court

Staff Writer

It's been five months since Philip Schaefer left Chino Municipal Court to become a Superior Court judge in Ontario's West Valley court com-

The one-time justice court judge says that presiding over Ontario's fourth Superior Court department is time-consuming but not nearly as hectic as the Municipal Court.

'When I was a judge in Chino, it wasn't unusual to have 10 felony preliminary hearings during the morning and 15 small claims actions in the afternoon," he said.

"Now I don't do as many cases, but the issues are more complex. I usually end up taking a stack of cases home to read at night.'

The 46-year-old Chino resident was appointed to the Superior Court last August by Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. to replace San Bernardino Judge Henry Busch, who retired in May. Holly Graham was appointed to take Schaefer's place

Schaefer is familiar with both sides of the judicial arena - he was a deputy district attorney in San Bernardino for 2 1/2 years and a private attorney in Pomona and Chino for six years.

An engineering major in college, Schaefer became interested in law after a disappointing summer working for his uncle

Gynecologist's office offers 'new look'

By KAREN ALTMAN Staff Writer

What do women dislike most about a trip to the gynecologist's office?

Most will list stirrup-equipped examining tables, cold instruments, aloof doctors and snooty nurses, and lack of having anyone to thoroughly discuss their problems with them.

Michael Morris and his wife, Mary Ellen Saar-Morris, listened to women's complaints and then designed a gynecological office that attempts to avoid those problems

Their practice, Women's Health Care in Upland, has been open for two years, although it has only been fully functioning since August.

The office is as atypical a gynecologist's office as possible. It doesn't even look like a doctor's office. The reception room resembles a genteel, stylish living room, with a large, comfortable couch and a round coffee table displaying a variety of magazines. Plants are everywhere.

The examining rooms, however, are what boggle most visitors. The familiar steel-and-vinyl examining table with threatening-looking stirrups has been replaced by a padded easy chair with rounded indentations for the patient's legs. The patient is gently eased into position with a hydraulic lift.

All instruments are neatly tucked away inside drawers. Speculums and other instruments that touch the patient's body are warmed by a heating pad.

The examining rooms also look like sophisticated living rooms with modern prints, plants and other decorations. The usual florescent lights are replaced by lamps.

"Ask any woman what she hates most about health care and she'll probably say pelvic exams," said Morris, 34, who earned his medical degree in 1970. "They hate stirrups and having to scoot down on the table."

The physical surroundings are part of a plan to make women feel more in control, said Saar-Morris, 33, nicknamed "Stick."

"We teach women to relax when the speculum is inserted. We teach them to identify what they're feeling how many women know what their ovary feels like? How many know what their cervix looks like?"

many know what their cervix looks like?"

Morris and his staff of two nurse-practitioners (Saar-Morris is one, Teri Richards, 25, is the other) perform general health care for women, with an emphasis on gynecology and family planning. Morris does not deliver babies or do hospital surgery.

babies or do hospital surgery.

It's not considered possible in medical circles to make it economically with out-patient care, said Morris.

"Most doctors make their money with their surgical practices and the office treatment is just something to be endured. They get their money from big fees paid by insurance or Medical."

Women's Health Care does not take welfare, Medical, Medicare or health insurance cases. Patients are responsible for filing their own insurance claims.

"When you take those cases, your paperwork is horrendous. I'd have to hire two people just for the paperwork," said Morris.

The bulk of patient work is handled by the nursepractitioners. Morris does the paperwork, aided by his new $8,000 computer.

new $8,000 computer.

The nurse-practitioner is a new concept in the health field — subject to resistance by some doctors.

"I got a letter just last week that started out, 'Doctor, your job is in jeopardy!"' said Morris.

Nurse-practitioners are registered nurses with an additional year of training. They started about 13 years ago ditional year of training. They started about 13 years ago in rural family practices where physicians were rare.

"Our job is to screen patients and to educate them," said Saar-Morris. "We separate those who need a physician's attention from those who don't. We're qualified to handle minor problems, such as vaginitis, and can dispense birth control."

Nurse-practitioners cannot diagnose — they're not doctors — and must follow protocols, or guidelines, set down by doctors. If anything ususual comes up, the doctor is summoned.

"What's good about this method is the doctor doesn't have to see 90 vaginitis cases every day. If someone with a serious problem walks in, he's not worn out," said

Patients (nurse-practitioners call them "clients") benefit because they don't have to pay for a doctor's time for each routine or minor problem.

Most of his patients call Morris by his first name. He doesn't wear a white coat or drape a stethoscope around his neck. Saar-Morris and Richards also shun the white

"The white coat is a barrier between the patient and doctor," said Morris. "There's nothing white or doctor-like in this office. We don't talk medical-ese. We consider ourselves normal people with a particular talent, medicine."

Morris chose "Women's Health Center" for a reason

— he concentrates on health and wellness, rather than illness.

"Medicine in America has traditionally been illness or crisis oriented, not preventative. It all boils down to economic motivation — it's less profitable to keep someone well."

Family planning (birth control) is a major part of the practice. Morris and Saar-Morris are feminists, believing that contraceptives and the ability to control one's body is what the women's movement is about.

Both work one day a week at a Planned Parenthood office in Pomona. They live in Crestline, but spend part of the week in Upland when they work late or the weather is bad in the mountains.

Some women are threatened by the non-medical atmosphere of Women's Health Care. Others are extremely enthusiastic about it.

"This is the first place where I didn't feel like a side of beef. I felt like I'd found somebody who really gave a damn how I felt physically and emotionally," said Carroll Nageotte, 45, an administrative assistant at Claremont Men's College.

"For 44 years doctors and gynecologists told me, 'You're a woman, learn to live with it.' Here I feel good about myself."

Vicki Hanna, 33, of Upland said she used to put off trips to the gynecologist.

"I couldn't stand those ugly hard tables. And I felt embarrassed asking about things that bothered me," said Hanna, a bank officer in Upland.

In addition to understanding English and American traditions, the students learn the social and cultural customs of the many nations represented by the group.

Parties on holidays often include foods and entertanment from an assortment of ethnic backgrounds.

The classes in English are offered five mornings each week and 31/2 hours Monday through Thursday nights. All classes are conducted at Mountain View Elementary School.

Since it's vital that many of the students learn English as soon as possible, some students attend daily classes. Several are studying 25 hours a week.

"The average student stays in the program for about 18 months but there is no designated time limit," explained the counselor. "Just as they can enter at any time, the students may leave when they wish."

The program involves seven teachers, two aides and a coordinator. Communication, for the most part, is in English. But when essential information is needed, students act as translators for each other.

While the bulk of the students are in their 20s, the ages range from high school age to over 60.

A few more women than men have been enrolled in the past, according to the reports.

Building construction declines in the West End

BRUCE THORNTON Staff Writer

With the exception of Montclair, cities in the West End and the unincorporated area of Sam Bernardino County recorded declines in new building activity during 1979, following a national trend.

The decline was disclosed in figures released since the year's end by the various building departments.

During 1979, Montclair issued 2,455 permits for building valued at $33.061.027. This amounts to an increase of 83 percent over the 2,387 permits issued in 1978 for a total of $18.092.330.

Despite its total-year increase, Montclair had a sizable decline in December 1979, when it issued 89 compared with the preceding December totals of 119 permits valued at $2,007,132.

On the other hand, Upland which established building records in 1975, 1976 and 1977 - showed a decline of 43.5 percent in 1979 when 2,074 permits were issued with a valuation of $38,854,115 compared to the 1978 totals of 2,336 permits valued at $68,720,953.

The Upland Building Department issued 123 last month with a value of $1,468,106, compared to its December 1978 totals of 110 permits worth $2,673,678.

The bulk of Upland's valuation last month was for 16 single-family dwellings with a total value of 1978, the city issued 2,684 permits amounting in value to $123,064,595, compared with 3,361 permits in 1979 valued at $102,464,416.

Permits for three high-value projects were issued in Ontario during December. One project included 41 houses in the city's southeast section in the 2800 and 2900 block on Bon View Avenue, the 2600, 2800 and 2900 blocks on Hope Avenue and in the 800 blocks on Deerfield and Dunes streets. Total valuation of the dwellings was $2,059,441.

Another permit, valued at $1,860,940, was issued for construction of an industrial warehouse at 2001 S. Baker Ave.

The other permit was for an addition to the Holiday Inn at 1801 E. G St. Permit valuation was Chino's permits declined in value from $25,781,808 for 3,964 permits in 1978 to $21,748,154 for 2,354 permits 1979. This was a decline of $4,033,654 in valuation, or 15.6 percent.

However, last month's activity in Chino showed an increase of more than $1.5 million over the December 1978 figure. A total of 103 permits were issued last month with a $2,211,865 valuation, compared with valuation of only $649,132 in December 1978.

Twelve industrial permits valued at $1,402,205 accounted for more than half of last month's permits.

The San Bernardino County Building and Safety Department reported that 12,254 permits with a valuation of $515,686,328 were issued last year in the county's unincorporated area.

'Hansel & Gretel' take on new look

Staff Writer

"Hansel and Gretel" are going to have a new look when the part-puppet and part-human stage presentation is given on Feb. 9 and 10 in the Little Theater at Chaffey

The production is the project of the children's theater department, directed by Ralph Strane, and the puppetry classes directed by Maxine Strane, at Chaffey College

'We have changed 'Hansel and Gretel' because we feel the wicked stepmother is out of date - there are many stepmothers these days and they aren't wicked," Strane

'We also don't think we need a father mean enough to send their kids out into the woods," he said. "If the kids get lost, it's their own fault. Maxine and Ralph Strane have collaborated in writing a few new twists to the old folk story

In this version, the mother and father go off to the market to sell the brooms they have made, and Hansel and Gretel's four friends want them to go to the fair. Hansel and Gretel say, "No," so the friends go off through the woods. After awhile, the kids decide they will go to the fair after all, and of course, they become lost in the woods. They fall asleep and the puppet animals - rabbits, bear, skunk, raccoon and squirrels cover them with leaves

In the children's dream sequence there will be a butterfly ballet. Strane said the butterflies will range from small ones on wires to butterflies with 8-foot wings.

The wings are like the circus aerial artists who used to hang on ropes with their legs and wave their arms with chiffon wings," Strane said.

When Hansel and Gretel wake up, they see the witch's house and then the old witch appears

There will be a candy house and Hansel and Gretel will take a bit off of it," Mrs. Strane said. The fence will have the posts of gingerbread children. "The idea is that these are Hansel and Gretel's friends who have been turned into gingerbread by the wicked witch.

Otto the peddler has been turned into an owl which sits over the mantel. Hansel and Gretel are in the cage waiting to be baked in the oven as gingerbread like their friends, but owl and the brown bear trick the witch into showing how she does it. With a mighty push, the witch is popped into the oven.

This breaks the witch's spell. The gingerbread fence comes back to life, the mother and father find their children and the candy house is full of treasures which 'Everyone lives happily ever after,' Strane said The fantasy tale will be given at 2:30 and 7:30 p.m. on Feb. 9 and at 2:30 on Feb. 10. Tickets will be available at Cast members are: Russ Dague of Ontario, Hansel; Anne Sullivan of Upland, Gretel; Teri Grimm of Cucamonga, mother; Barton Millar of Upland, father; Tom Newman of Corona, witch; Richard Jernejcic of Cucamonga, Johann; John Bryon as Fredrick, Kolleen Johnson as Heidi and Trudy Cowan as Christina, all of Cucamonga; and Jeff Grey of Ontario, Otto the peddler.

The puppets, including a family of mice found in the witch's house, were made by and will manipulated by members of Mrs. Strane's puppet and puppetry production classes. Cast and crew members are from Strane's children's theater class.

This production of "Hansel and Gretel" will be shown, by invitation, at the Puppeteers of America's Region Festival to be held Feb. 15-18 in San Diego. Rod puppets depicting colorful Spaniards, made by the puppet class members, will line the entrance of the festival's auditorium to carry out the festival theme, "Puppets

'Hansel and Gretel' also will be performed on Feb. 16 in Balboa Park.

Last year, puppets from Chaffey College took part in the finale of the popular motion picture, "The Muppet Movie." This was by invitation to the Stranes from Frank Oz, who is the voice of Miss Piggy, Animal, Fozzie Bear and Sam, the American Eagle, in the famous Muppet family.

With the universal language of love written on their faces, Nghiep and Dinh Chu said, "People are so kind. We don't know how to say thank you.

Sponsored by the North Hills Seventh - day Adventist Church in Claremont, the refugee Chu family spoke inside a Christian church for the first time of their experiences escaping from the jungles of Vietnam.

The story they told is similar to that of all

Vietnamese "boat people." Born Chinese, the Communist regime considered them "substandard," and banished them to the jungle. Chu was trained as a welder and engine mechanic, but the mechanics of farming were unknown to him. But it was produce or die in the jungle.

The question "How can we prove productive for the government and still escape this oppressive regime?" haunted Chu. The Chus then volunteered to go to North Vietnam and work as fishermen for the government. Their fishing boat would become the means of escape, for after proving productive for a year or more, he would have more control of the sail boat in which he fished.

Chu earned the equivalent of two to three American dollars a month, which bought 20 kilos of food, consisting of 2 kilos of poor quality rice and roots, dry potatoes and

'It's people that keep America Christian'

Montclair Ministerial Association On our American coins, as well as on our "paper" money, is the phrase: "In God We Trust." When our government officials take the oath of office, often it is done with their hand on the Bible. In the acceptance speeches of many of our officials, some reference is made to trust in God, or help needed from God, or with God's help, etc., etc. In fact, in general, America and Americans claim that we are a Christian country.

To claim to be a Christian country, and to BE one, are two entirely different things. Listen to some of these thoughts: American leads the world in rape, in murder. in robberies, in divorce, in the abusive use of drugs or alcohol, and more people are killed on our highways each year than from specific diseases . If we are a Christian country, and yet have all these other faults, isn't that quite a paradox?

We, in Montclair, have been living in a relatively clean, decent, moral, and law-abiding community. Those of us who are its citizens can keep it this way, or we can abuse all the privileges and joys we have, and permit it to become a bad community to live in. Only we, as individuals, can keep Montctair a good, clean, decent, and "maybe even" a Christian community. Will you, as an individual citizen, do all you can? We of the Montclair Ministerial association surely hope you will do your part!

sailed in the dead of night. "The boat first blew up to Communist China. We couldn't stay there. It was a five day trip to the South through several storms. Everything was taken by the Communists. We were hungry, wet and cold. Upon arriving at Haiman in South Vietnam we were given food and clothing. It was under the communist regime so we sailed to Hong Kong and from there to Inter - America — and to our new home in the United States. We are so happy to be here!" Nghiep concluded.

Five-year-old Anh Chu was still wide eved and fascinated by her first sight of a decorated and lighted Christmas tree at the church during her father's talk. Three-year-old Phuc was restless and squirming in his father's arms, and two-year-old Chonh was fast asleep in her mother's arms, as the congregation startled them with spontaneous applause for a "plucky" little family who had found freedom and support in the United States.

The smiling family received greetings, handshakes and welcomes from individual members before returning to their home in Pomona. The church, which is sponsoring the Chus, chose an apartment in an area containing other refugees to make the transition easier. Church members furnished, decorated and stocked it with supplies, and the Chus celebrated their first Christmas by opening presents from individual church Nghiep is now enrolled as a student at Madison Adult School in Pomona where he is learning English. After he learns enough English, he looks forward to employment as a welder or auto mechanic. Unknown to either church, the North Hills church settled the Chus in an apartment next door to some relatives being sponsored by the Covina Seventh-day Adventist Church. Their children are attending public school in the area and are helping teach the young Chu children.

Mrs. Toenniessen is a member of the North Hills Seventh-day Adventist Church.

Bill would exempt areas from odd-even Portions of San Bernardino County would be exempted from Gov. Jerry Brown's odd-even gasoline rationing measure if a bill introduced in the state Senate Tuesday becomes law.

Republican William Craven of Oceanside submitted the legislation which would also end rationing in 28 rural counties, including parts of Riverside and San Bernardino

An aide to Craven said it was designed to aid motorists in rural areas who travel "excessive distances and need more than one tank of gas," but have little access to mass transit.

The Iranian crisis generally has not been accompanied by a gasoline shortage and the order has not been enforced in some areas of the state.

Rusty Schweickert, appointed chairman of the state Energy Commission last year by Brown, said the governor has no plan to rescind the order, partly because 'many of the oil companies indicate a considerable uncertainty" about future oil supplies.

"Although the present condition appears to be one of marginally adequate supply, there are possibilities of spot shortages appearing," he said.

He said the odd-even plan, even if currently unenforced in some areas, "would be immediately available" to cope with a crucial oil shortage should one develop.

Another measure, ACR88. Assemblyman Eugene Chappie, R-Roseville, would end the program, leaving any decision to reinstate odd-even rationing up to local cities and counties. It will be heard by an Assembly energy subcommittee next week

Basically, the odd-even plan requires motorists whose license plates end with even numbers to buy gasoline on even-numbered days.

The requirements do not apply to out-of-state travelers or those further than 100 miles from

The Grove House stands on a hilltop overlooking the Pitzer College campus, Claremont. The 78-year-old old house will be dedicated Thursday and Friday as a student center. Frank L. Ellsworth, Pitzer College president, and Lee Jackson, director of the Friends of The Grove House, chat on the steps about the two-day celebration. The house was nearly demolished twice, but the second time was

Pitzer College sets bungalow dedication

The Grove House on the Pitzer College campus, Claremont, survived the threat of demolition twice and will be dedicated as a student center on Thursday and Friday.

Highlights of the dedication will be a lecture by Neil Harris on "The American Renaissance" at 8 p.m. Thursday in Avery Auditorium.

Student-conducted tours of The Grove House will start at noon Friday. Also on Friday will be a slide show and lecture by Robert Winter on "The California Bungalow" in Avery Auditorium at 2 p.m., T-shirt printing at The Grove House (those interested are to supply their own shirts), folk music by Donald Brenneis and Friends and poetry reading in the Bert Meyers Poetry Room of The Grove House.

ment in America (1897-1919), which was the era of Louis Tiffany and his stained glass and Frank Lloyd Wright and his revolutionary style of architecture.

Situated at 721 Harrison Ave., Claremont, the home was first occupied by C.F. Loops. A friend of the family said the home was furnished in Chinese decor with heavy carved teak wood, Golden Chinese dragons, ivory bibelots and countless oriental throw rugs in every room.

In 1911, George Hamilton, a Chicago lawyer, bought the house. He planted the orange grove on three acres surrounding the house. Because it had been a "grove house," when moved to the Pitzer campus, it was decided it should be officially called The Grove House.

The longest residents of the house were the Arvid Zetterbergs, who lived there for 30 years.

In 1975, after disposing of the land, the Zetterbergs sold the house to Pilgrim Place, a retirement settlement for Christian workers. When Pilgrim Place decided to expand a health care facility, it was either raze the house or sell it to be moved.

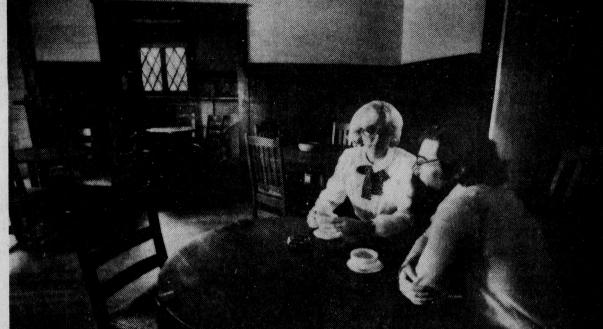

Students in Barry Sanders' Pitzer class in the arts and crafts movement became interested in making the house a class project. Pitzer bought the house for $1 and it was moved to the Pitzer campus.

Unfortunately, Sanders said, it was placed too close to the clock tower. Funds that had been raised through gifts and from students taxing themselves had run out. It was voted by the Pitzer board to terminate the project and destroy the house, which to that point, had cost $60,000.

"At the 11th hour," Sanders said,
"a class member, Sheila Kemper, was so distraught about the prospects, she contacted her father, Crosby Kemper, and through the Enid and Crosby Kemper Foundation, it was possible to move the house back and furnish it entirely in mission furniture."

The foundation provided over $100,000 to refurbish the house, furnish it, provide for lectures and to supply ongoing maintenance costs.

Perched on a hill overlooking the Pitzer campus, the house now will provide a meeting place, study center, small classrooms and a future coffee shop for students,

Initiatives profitable for political campaign firms

Copley News Service

SACRAMENTO - The initiative process, conceived as a political tool to be used by the "little never has failed in man'' against the entrenched special interests, is becoming a source of considerable income and influence for a few California political consulting firms.

are two firms, one in San Francisco and one in Orange County.

San Francisco-based Woodward, McDowell and Larson had its first taste of initiative campaigns in 1978 and the experience was so satisfying that the firm may handle two initiative campaigns.

The campaign for Proposition 13 in the first half of 1978, which Butcher-Forde managed, spent nearly $2.5 million.

Spokesmen for the two do nothing else in 1980 but firms would not say how much they earned from the two campaigns, but both said the profit was less than has been suggested.

Jack McDowell, personable and portly veteran newsman who does most of the news media relations for the San Francisco firm, said, "A lot of people get the goofy idea that you take the total While members of the expenditure times 15 percent (commission)" and you get our commission.

"I'm not trying to poor mouth it," McDowell said.

What the firm does get for managing a campaign can be considerable. however.

It charges a $5,000-amonth fee - which came to at least $40,000 for successfully opposing last year's anti-smoking Proposition 5 — and it gets a commission on all the advertisements placed with the various media. In the case of Proposition 5, there advertising purchases, according to figures from campaign contribution reports on file here. If the firm got 15 percent, considered normal, that could have meant more than $400,000. McDowell said, however, the firm had to pay 3 percent to the media placement firm it used and cover a lot of other

It is more difficult to determine how much Butcher-Forde made from the property tax cutting Proposition 13 campaign. But the firm gets a fee for every letter it produces its highly sophisticated computer mailing operation. That fee, Englander said, is variable and negotiable and ranges up from one cent per letter. Since more than 5 million letters were mailed, the firm's take could have been $50,000 and up just for the mailing.

Englander said the firm must pay for tremendous overhead and the profit "is not as much as some think. and probably more than many think we're worth."

If the purpose is to ensure victory, the firms may be worth anything they can get, because they have provided victories, and in at least one case where a win was not considered

Englander also disputes a Gagan comment that the involvement of the consulting firms is somehow subverting the intention of the initiative as a form of popular is indicated by their success in defeating Proposition 5. The measure was strongly favored in the polls up to a month before the election, but lost handily.

Although their clients were the major tobacco companies, which provided most of the $6.5 million raised for the opposition campaign, Woodward-Mc-Dowell never made any attempt to defend either the smoking. payments. Dr. Saul Klaman, president of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks, went so far as to declare that "two incomes are now essential" for new-home buyers. Other economists were not so emphatic but agreed in general that it helps. Obviously, they were referring to average that is, the value of the situations and not to young home is 2.01 times the families blessed with doting rich parents or to those who are on their own, affluent beyond the norm.

This trend toward reliance on two incomes shows in the statistics of surveys

The Home Owners Warranty program, an affiliate of the National Association of Home Builders, conducts yearly surveys to compile what it calls a "Profile of the New Home Buver.

The latest, for which results are available, shows that nearly half - 48.2 percent, to be exact - of all the new - home - buying households have "two or more wage earners."

But the figure for firsttime buyers with two incomes shot up to 61 percent. This trend, presumably, is still growing.

However, these figures are more than a year old. It would be reasonable to assume that the money figures, particularly the housing costs, have increased at least 15 percent since these results were compiled, but the trends should still be valid. Also realize that this study covered only new-home buyers, the homes of owners insured under the warranty program. Here, then, are the key disclosures:

- The most common down payment was between 10 and 20 percent.

The main source of down payment was "equity from the sale of a previous home" for 47.7 percent of the buyers and "savings" for another 44.6 percent. (This reflects the increasing practice of "upgrading" to acquire a better, larger home.)

- Only 30.4 percent of the new-home buyers were first-time home owners.

- 50.2 percent of the buyers were second- or third-time home owners and the remaining 13 percent have owned four or more homes. 63.3 percent lived in their own home before buying the new home and 31.7 percent were renters. The most common interest paid by new-home buyers was 8.26 percent to percent, according to 24.9 percent of those polled, by 8.51 to 8.75 percent for another 19.5 percent of the respondents. (Compare that with today's mortgage rates of 13 to 14 percent.)

YOU WILL MAKE THE DIFFERENCE

High blood pressure cannot be ignored, needs treatment

If your doctor has told you that you have high blood pressure, hypertension, and that you need treatment there are a few things you should know.

You cannot ignore high blood pressure; it will not simply go away. It can be effectively treated. Treatment of high blood pressure may prevent heart attack, stroke or kidney failure.

Diuretic agents are usually the cornerstone of most drug treatment programs for high blood pressure. By eliminating excess sodium from the body, these medications are helpful in controlling blood pressure. Excess sodium can result in water retention or edema which puts a strain on kidneys, heart and blood vessels. If diuretic therapy is not effective in bringing blood pressure down to normal, your physician may add other drugs to the treatment program. In most cases, some treatment must be continued indefinitely, perhaps over a lifetime, to produce continuously good results.

The excess fluid that sodium holds in the body may also put an added burden on the heart. For this reason, low-sodium diets are also used in treating hypertension.

According to The American Heart Association it takes two to treat your high blood pressure - the doctor and you. Your part is just as important as your physician's. They continue by recommending the following:

1. If you don't know whether you have high blood pressure, ask your doctor to check your pressure. High blood pressure is known as the silent killer because it often has no symptoms before causing death, heart disease, stroke or kidney failure.

2. If you have hypertension, follow your doctor's instructions about taking your medicine, adjusting your diet including sodium intake or weight loss, and changes in general health habits.

3. If your physician prescribes medications, keep taking them whether you feel well or not, and whether you think the drugs are helping or hurting. Report exactly how you feel to your doctor and his staff. He can then make suitable changes needed in your treatment

4. Cooperate with your physician and his staff. As a team you, the doctor and his staff can and will get your pressure under control.

If your doctor has recommended limiting the amount of sodium in your diet you might want to try this delicious rice pilaf. Food cooked without salt does not have to be flavorless. By becoming familiar with subtle uses of spices and herbs, you can fix tasty dishes without using table salt.

Many turning to coal, wood as heating solutions

By JOHN M. BOGERT

Copley News Service LOS ANGELES Prometheus, it is said, stole fire from the gods and gave it to man. And fire belonged to man all these years until decided to steal it back.

in the cold, so to speak. Even in Los Angeles where we don't directly burn oil for home heat, the bills for energy of all kinds are ris-

So what are the alternatives?

Many people in this country are turning to the only viable alternatives there are, coal and wood. Here, the choice is pretty much limited to wood, no cheap commodity. But wood, unlike oil, gas or electricity, can be scavenged.

It also can be purchased and delivered for between $130 and $160 a cord. If you choose to burn the stuff for heat, what is of prime importance is the vessel in which you burn it.

Wood-burning stoves are coming into use for more than decorative purposes. In fact, Jeneve Hough of suburban Hawthorne, found that a high - quality wood stove is enough to heat their entire, 1,200 - square - foot

'We looked for quite a while for the proper stove for us. I had seen Franklin stoves in other homes. And though they looked nifty and they could heat you out of the room they were in, they didn't do much for the rest of the house.

After a yearlong search she found what she was looking for, a Norwegian made Jotul stove.

Though this is an odd shape," she says studying the solid modernistic lines of her living room's centerpiece, "I've gotten to like it. I also like the fact that we can leave the front door of it open to watch the fire in the evenings, and close its door at night for some real controlled heat. Actually it is the opening and closing of doors and dampers on metal stoves that gives them their huge heating advantage.

the And though technology has been greatly improved in the last 20 vears, the entire concept is certainly nothing new. Ever since the invention of the chimney in 13thcentury Europe, man has been looking for ways to trap part of the estimated 60 to 80 percent of usable heat that goes up the flue.

Stoves, even primitive the world's oil powers ones, were always far less wasteful than fireplaces. Which leaves you and me Their development can be traced from China in 600 B.C., through Russia and Germany to all parts of Europe.

They eventually crossed to this side of the Atlantic where, in 1744, Benjamin Franklin made some improvements on what was basically an iron box.

THE REPORT OF THE PARTY OF THE

Elsewhere in the nation, according to wood stove industry statistics, the number of stoves in use has jumped from 250,000 to 2 million since 1972.

The Carter White House, in an effort to encourage the use of alternative energy sources, is preparing to install six wood-burning stoves in the executive mansion and at Camp draft controls and safety features. All cost between $200 and $1,000 installed.

They are also of two types - freestanding and the kind that can be built into an existing fireplace.

And though there are now hundreds of wood stoves on the market answering the booming demand, all share these basic design characteristics to greater and lesser efficiency

However, the single most important characteristic of any wood stove is the draft

For without these small blackened potbellied stove vents on the doors or backs residents have switched good stoves, airtight, with burn can be increased to a roar or decreased to extinction while preventing the updraft from sucking warm air out of the house

Meanwhile, inside the stove there is a system of metal baffles that keeps the heat from rising up the chimney and affords more complete combustion of wood by reburning escaping

Such airtight radiant heaters are rated No. 1 in efficiency by the Gas and Mechanical Laboratory of Los Angeles.

Rated just behind them is the fireplace stove with a front opening. In third place is the old-fashioned or antique stove.

The best way to find which stove is best for you, according to several dealers, is to shop around. Any good stove store will offer you all the literature you need on any given stove. It is also imperative that proved by either or both the Underwriters Laboratories and I.C.B.O., the Inter- ago national Committee of Building Officials.

The store owners say many cities will not approve a stove, especially an antique stove, unless it carries the approval of these two testing organizations.

Which brings us to the very tricky issue of installation. Even if done by a certified contractor, it's good to keep in mind that there are contractors and contractors must be of proper length, width and construction and be approved to 2,000 degrees Fahrenheit to function safely. That is why it is imperative that you have your stove inspected by the local fire or building inspector after it is installed. Better this, than to find that your fire insurance won't cover a fire started by an uninspected stove.

Some insurance companies will not insure a home that has only a wood stove for heat. Many building codes will not approve such an arrangement either, so it is best to first check before you pull out your present heating system.

The Houghs of Hawthorne do have a gas heater, but they found their airtight stove heats quite well.

Using only three to nine small logs, or a couple of large logs, for a whole night, they have managed to you only consider stoves ap- cut their gas bills back to an average of $6 from a high of $28 from a year and a half

> Since the configuration of the stove allows heating on top, she also uses it to cook chili and soups.

And the Houghs manage to find their wood on building sites and in fallen tree limbs throughout their neighborhood.

Despite the euphoria of lowered heating bills and the feeling that one is conserving energy, it can require a good deal of work to cut, stack and carry wood,

And while the statistics relating the costs of wood over fuel oil are available to gas heat (one cord is roughly equivalent to $1,086 worth of viously more economical.

'Unusual things' worry earthquake researchers

By YVONNE BASKIN Copley News Service

Unusual things seem to be happening in Southern California that scientists say could be forewarnings of a major earthquake, but no one appears ready to make any predictions.

The unusual occurrences include stretching movements in land that for years had been compressing and enigmatic changes in radon gas emissions.

The observations have given the U.S. Geological Survey a new "sense of urgency in finding out what's going on," Barry Raleigh of the USGS regional headquarters in Menlo Park said in an interview.

The most important occurrence, he said, is the extension or pulling apart of land that was compressing and, in effect, squeezing the San Andreas fault together and making it harder for it to slip.

The USGS will drill bore holes at sites along the fault near Palmdale to determine the stress in the rocks.

'It is important for us to try to determine as soon as possible what the absolute shear stress on the San Andreas fault is," he said.

"If the present pattern (of extension instead of compression) persisted for a long period, we might expect a quake on the San Andreas to occur sooner than it might have otherwise.

'We can't say when because we don't yet know the state of the fault, how strong the locking force is that's keeping it from slipping," he said.

The observations of ground extension were made this fall by two different groups of researchers using different methods.

For the last eight years the USGS has been using lasers to make detailed measurements of distances across the fault. The distances are measured between "monuments" 15 to 20 miles apart at about 200 sites statewide. The measurements show 'how rapidly California is distorting from the forces that eventually result in earthquakes," Raleigh

From 1973 to 1978, all of Southern California from Gorman to the Imperial Valley, Raleigh said, showed a "north - south compression by three parts in 10 million per year. That's somewhere in the neighborhood of six inches a year over the entire segment."

Between early spring of 1978 and early spring of 1979 when the annual measurements were taken, the pattern changed from compression to extension in three of the lines near Gorman, Palmdale and the Salton Sea, he said.

Then in September, scientists at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena got a startling result using high frequency radio waves to measure the distance between JPL and sites in the Owens Valley and at Goldstone in the Mojave Desert.

"Between spring of 1979 and September, in a six-month period, Pasadena had moved away from Goldstone by nine inches," Raleigh

This evidence of extension caused the USGS to remeasure its monument line near Palmdale.

'We found the area was extending growing or pulling apart principally in a northeast and southwest direction," he said. The rate was such that in six months "it was like adding a quarter of an acre of land in an area 10 miles by 15

The USGS now is remeasuring all of its lines throughout California.

Raleigh said it is obvious something is going on within the earth that needs to be better understood, but he says he is reluctant to label the observation 'strange'' because precise measurements of earth movement have been kept for less than 10

Since the October measurements, the USGS has held two meetings with earthquake scientists to discuss the findings and has increased the frequency of observations and measurements, he

Another set of apparent anomalies that have some researchers curious are unexplained increases in radon gas emission from three water wells in the San Gabriel Mountains since June. These are being monitored by Caltech scientists.

Monitoring these emissions "is a technique that's been successful in the Soviet Union in prediction, but it's still enigmatic," Raleigh said.

Caltech seismologist Kate Hutton said in an interview that observations of associations between large earthquakes and radon gas emissions in China, Russia and Japan make scientists take these emissions seriously as possible precursors.

"I don't think there's enough information or understanding to make a prediction, but there are strange things happening.

"My feeling is that the only thing we can do is do our best to explain it all to the public.

"We have to be honest and talk about it," Hutton said. "We can't sit on it. We just don't know enough yet to predict."

Raleigh said it is the intention of the USGS to try to get enough data to make a prediction, if one is called

The bore holes in the fault are designed to answer that question. Water will be pumped into the holes at high pressure, stretching and eventually splitting the rock. The pressure it takes to split the rock will "give us some idea of the stress holding the rocks together," Raleigh
